

HEATH HOUSE FOLLOW-UP

*In the interest of providing our readers with a comprehensive understanding of this major Frank Lloyd Wright landmark in Buffalo, NY, we provide some additional images related to the William R. Heath House (Fall 2006, Page 28).

A view of the Bird Avenue elevation of the W.R. Heath House shows the house before alterations. A long continuous horizontal line of stone runs parallel to the foundation line and the roofline. The large urn at the entrance is shown at its original height.

Frank Lloyd Wright designed a grand piano for the Heath House. In the archives at Taliesin there is a drawing of the front, side and top of a monumental piano with storage cabinets incorporated into the sides. It is not known if the piano was ever built.
